ONE PLACE. MANY STORIES

ALICE ROSS

used to work in the financial services industry, where she wrote riveting brochures about pensions and ISAs that everyone read avidly and no one ever put straight into the bin. One day, when nobody was looking, she managed to escape. Dragging her personal chef (aka her husband) along with her, she headed to Spain, where she began writing witty, sexy romps designed to amuse slightly more than pension brochures.

Missing Blighty (including the weather – but don't tell anyone), she returned five years later and now works part-time in the tourism industry. When not writing, she can be found scratching out a tune on her violin, walking her dog in wellies two sizes too big (don't ask!), or standing on her head in a yoga pose. Alice loves to hear from her readers.
