From the Author

This book brings together rituals and practices that are not meant to be done alone. They may be performed with a practitioner near you — or with a confidant who shares your purpose. Regardless of the specifics, this also includes black practices.

When two or more people come together to work with energy, the space around them begins to vibrate at a different frequency. Standalone rituals can be powerful when repeated often — but when a second, third, or more person is working with you, performing a sequence of practices toward the same goal, you create a resonance that pierces the thicker layers of reality faster and more precisely. That's why I deliberately moved away from the usual format of “lock yourself in a room and do it alone.” Every ritual described here requires the presence of another person — or several: a mentor, someone close to you, or someone who truly shares your purpose all the way to the end.

These black practices included in this book do not tolerate half-measures. They are not for casual curiosity or for people who might stop halfway. They are tools that change destinies — break through walls — open doors that were sealed shut, and keep them shut until they're completed.

Some practices in this book require strict role assignments: one leads, the other follows; one gives, the other receives. As always, I'll describe everything clearly and briefly, but I will emphasize the most important details.

Important: Do not attempt these rituals if there is hidden resentment, envy, or distrust between you and your partner/co-performer. These practices act like a test strip — they reveal everything that each person has buried inside. If there's a crack in the relationship, during the ritual (or shortly after) that crack will widen into a real gap. But if you move forward together consciously, with purity of intent and a single shared goal, you'll be able to do what isn't possible alone.

Love Rituals

A folk spell for dealing with cheating

This is a binding ritual. You will be able to bind the cheating man to his home in the following way: three people who will recite the words (including the wife!) gather in the couple's home from Thursday to Friday at midnight. The wife takes the beloved man's shoes. The front door is opened. The wife taps the sole of his shoes against the doorstep from inside the apartment/house. Then the chorus recites:

Wherever my dear (husband's name) may go, let him pine for the house, for his loving wife (wife's name), for eternal love. Away from the house on foot — back in a rush. We bind it!

After that, everyone who recited drinks grape juice/wine together by the candle. The melted remains — the small wick stubs — are kept by the wife for a month somewhere near the shoes of the unfaithful husband.

It's important that in the morning the man puts on the exact shoes that were bewitched. Then the spell will begin to work and bring the intended result.

Binding with hair

With this ritual, there's a chance to make someone fall in love — but be responsible: don't start the ritual unless you're sure of your own feelings.

Use only the specific magical tools mentioned and do not change a single word in the incantation. First, get hair strands from a specific person. You can secretly cut them at night if you sleep together, or remove a few strands unnoticed from his comb or clothing. Just make sure they truly are his strands.

Then do the following: wait until midnight, gather with one “sister-in-spirit” (a close companion or close female friend), and light a candle (the moon phase doesn't matter — you can do the candle recitation every three days, forty times). Take the man's hair strands and pull out from yourself strands of the same length.

Braid the hair together while the chorus recites:

From this moment on, we are one with you, beloved, and no outside power can ever divide us. Like fire and smoke, like ice and frost, like earth and grass — so we are together, you and me!

The person who wants to be loved braids the strands; the chorus reads/speaks the words. After the braiding is done, the sister-in-spirit/the friend burns the hair strands over the candle.

It's extremely important to approach the magic ritual with the correct inner mindset. When the friend sets the hair on fire, try to imagine a happy, harmonious relationship with this person in the near future. When the strands burn, a large amount of energy is released — and the right thoughts will direct it toward the intended outcome.

A spell to bring your husband back from a mistress

Did another woman take your husband? If it happened recently and they have no children, everything can be fixed!

Go to a temple with your “sister-in-spirit”/friend and bring home consecrated water and one candle. At midnight, during the waxing moon, sit together at the table. Light the candle, place the water in front of you, watch the flame, and recite with the group eight times:

God’s servant (wife’s name) is forever bound in marriage before the Lord to God’s servant (husband’s name)! They swore vows of love and promised not to leave each other. As the candle flame burns and flares up, so will my husband remember everything said at the altar, and love will flare up again. He pines for (wife’s name) and the children; he cannot see the white world without them. From now on there is only one path for him — to return to the family, to his beloved wife (name) and the children (children’s names). So it is! Amen!

Let the candle burn out completely, and bury the remaining stub near the house. In the morning, when you wake up, drink the consecrated water (only the wife does this).

Important warning: this is a powerful magical ritual, and it will work only if you truly find the strength to sincerely forgive the person you love and never bring up the affair again. Don’t initiate contact — let the husband start writing, calling, and coming on his own. You should respond, but not right away. Give him the chance to make the decision “himself.”

Love spell “on his clothes”

You'll need to get one clothing item from the man (for example, a T-shirt/shirt) and buy thread of the same color. When buying, you're not allowed to take change. Carefully unpick the seam slightly, then sew it right away — then take the thread spool to the cemetery area together with your “sister-in-spirit”/friend.

Next, find a woman's grave where the deceased woman's name matches your name. Leave the threads for nine days (in a small bag — hide it inside the gate area!). When the time comes, take the threads back and hide them outside in a private spot (don't bring the spool into the home/apartment!).

On the weekend, go together to the market, buy bay leaf and a new needle (again — don't take change!). In the evening, light three candles and unpick the same seam again that you already sewed. Take the bay leaf and say aloud to the chorus three times:
