Chapter 1. Introduction: briefly about the history of Voodoo

As an introduction and before you move on to practical knowledge of Voodoo magic, I want to warn you against unforgivable mistakes and underestimating the possibilities of Voodoo magic. This means that all your actions must be imbued with deep respect for the Gods and Spirits of Voodoo. You should definitely say words of gratitude after every ritual, rites, and any action you perform within the framework of Voodoo magic. And of course, you must be able to put up magical defenses against unwanted influences from Spirits or Gods that you cannot control.

Putting yourself under protection during Voodoo rituals is important to ensure your physical and energy security. Here are a few steps you can take to protect yourself during magical practice. The first is to cleanse and protect the astral field. Before starting any ritual, be sure to cleanse your astral field with meditation, visualization or aromatic oils such as lavender, St. John's wort, chamomile or santal. This will help to remove negative energies and create a protective barrier. Use protective amulets and talismans when conducting magical practices. Protective amulets or talismans can be charged with magical power and serve as symbols of protection from negative energies. Include protection rituals in your magical practice. For example, you can place white candles on the altar, recite a prayer of protection, or use symbols such as a pentagram to create a protective circle around yourself, which is created before the start of the ritual ceremony. walk around the perimeter of your workspace and visualize how the energy wall rises, protecting you from negative influences. Say a prayer or a spell, addressing the spirits or loa, ask for protection and guidance during the ritual. Be sure to finish any ritual or rite correctly. Say goodbye to the spirits and Loa (Voodoo gods), thank them for their help and close the magic circle to break the connection with the magical forces. After completing the ritual, do a short meditation or visualization to make sure that you are completely cleansed and protected from negative influences. It is also very important to observe ethical standards in your magical practice. After the ritual, pay attention to your physical and emotional standing. Take care of yourself to restore energy and harmony. To effectively protect yourself in magical practice, learn and improve in this direction. Knowledge and experience will help you better understand how to work with energy and strength. Remember that protection is an important part of magical practice, and it must be integrated into your Voodoo rituals to ensure your safety and the success of your magical efforts. And now that you already understand how to properly put up a defense, you can proceed directly to practice. To put up the right protection, it is necessary to deeply understand the meaning of the magic circle in Voodoo Magic. Its great importance allows us to dwell on this concept in a little more detail, for a deeper understanding of working with it. The magic circle is an important element of magical practices in many magical systems, including voodoo magic. A magic circle is a symbolic or physical space, usually surrounded by a barrier, which serves to distinguish magical work from the outside world and to protect against negative The main function of the magic circle in voodoo magic is to create a protective barrier around the practitioner and the magical work. The circle serves as a filter that allows only positive and desirable energies to enter the magical space, and repels negative influences and unwanted spirits. A magic circle can also serve to concentrate and enhance the magical energies within it. It creates a kind of “energy reflection” that can enhance the effectiveness of a ritual or magical practice. The circle defines the boundaries of the magical space, separating it from the world of reality. This helps the practitioner to focus on the magical work and avoid distractions, energies and interference. So, what does a MAGIC CIRCLE in VOODOO mean? Creating a magic circle in voodoo magic usually involves the following steps: The first is choosing a place suitable for performing a ritual or magical practice. This place should be clean and cozy. Next, clean the place of negative energies, using, for example, smoking white salvia or any aromatic oils. Then draw a symbolic circle on the ground or on the floor.

It can be a circle, a triangle, a pentagram, or another symbol associated with your magical practice. Raise the energy and charge the circle with prayer, meditation or other magical methods. Imagine how the energy barrier is recreated around you.

After the end of the magical practice, it is necessary to close the magic circle in order to break the connection with the magical world and return to everyday reality. This can be done as follows: If you have interacted with spirits or gods, thank them for participating in the ritual and ask them to leave. Disperse the energy that you charged into the circle. Imagine how the barrier slowly disappears and the energy returns to nature. Symbolically close the circle, for example, by noticing how it disappears in reverse order, returning to the ground. Thank the forces and the spiritual space for their support and help in the ritual. Closing the magic circle helps to complete the magical work and return to everyday life, as well as prevent the influence of unwanted energies and entities after the completion of the ritual. Let's take a closer look at what Wood Magic is and where this concept came from. Voodoo magic is a complex of religious and magical practices that have roots in the African diaspora, especially among African slaves brought to the New World, in particular to Haiti and Louisiana. Its history and origins are complex and linked to different aspects of African, Caribbean, and American culture. The main roots of Voodoo Magic are associated with the religious and magical practices of African peoples, especially from the regions now known as West and Central Africa. Among these peoples there were various beliefs, rituals and rituals, which were subsequently mixed with other cultural influences. During the colonial era, African slaves were brought to the Caribbean and the Southern United States, bringing their traditions and religious practices. These African elements mixed with Christian and other cultural influences, including Native American and French. In Haiti, a successful slave revolution took place in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, which led to the creation of an independent State of Haiti. During this revolution, the religious and magical practices of African slaves became a strong symbol of resistance and unity. This important event contributed to the spread of Voodoo Magic. Louisiana, which also had slaves, formed its own version of Voodoo Magic, known as “Louisiana Voodoo.” This version also includes elements of the Native American and Catholic traditions. The origin and history of Voodoo Magic are linked to a variety of cultural and historical factors. Let’s take a closer look at some of them, as well as provide examples of Voodoo Magic practices: The first thing to focus on is certainly the African roots of Voodoo magic, which has roots in the religious and magical practices of African peoples such as the Yaoruba, Dahome, Fon and others. These peoples had their own gods, rituals and magical rituals. For example, the Yoruba worshipped orisha (gods) and practiced rituals to attract their attention and gain favor. The colonial legacy, which also had a great influence on the development of Voodoo magic. During the period of slavery, African slaves were brought to colonial territories, where their religious and magical practices clashed with Christianity and other cultural influences. This led to the mixing and syncretism of beliefs. For example, the Orishas of African religions became associated with Christian saints, and such associations became part of Voodoo Magic. Voodoo practices are rooted in African religious traditions, including belief in spirits, ancestors, and magical rituals. Voodoo also includes elements of priesthood and cult worship.

Resettlement to America: During the slave trade era, many African slaves were brought to America, where they introduced their religious and magical practices, including voodoo. Syncretism with Christianity, which was expressed in mixing Voodoo with Christianity. For example, voodoo practitioners could attribute Christian santas or saints to their spiritual practices. The Haitian Revolution in the late 18th and early 19th centuries played a key role in the spread of Voodoo Magic. In Haiti, Voodoo has taken on a special form and has become an important part of the national identity. There it was called “wudong,” and this powerful art combines elements of religion, magic and medicine.

Louisiana Voodoo that crossed the ocean and settled in America, along with former African slaves. In Louisiana, especially in the city of New Orleans, Voodoo Magic has acquired its own characteristics, known as “Louisiana Voodoo”. Here it is mixed with French Creole, Native American and Catholic culture. Louisiana Voodoo rituals include the use of voodoo dolls, amulets, and candles. Nowadays, voodoo remains alive and continues to be practiced in different parts of the world, including Haiti, Louisiana and other regions. Voodoo has also influenced pop culture, and parts of its practices sometimes become part of esoteric and magical traditions. Voodoo is not only a magical practice, but also a religion for many of its fans. The main elements of voodoo include ancestor worship, belief in spirits, oracles, and religious ceremonies. Voodoo religious rituals are conducted in order to connect with spirits and gain their help and protection. In the modern world, voodoo can be practiced in different ways and interpreted in different ways. There are both traditional and modern approaches to voodoo. It may include elements of medicine, herbal medicine, magic, and spiritual practice. So, as we can see. Voodoo magic is a complex and multifaceted system of beliefs and practices that has a rich history and cultural significance for various communities. In addition to religious aspects, voodoo also includes magical practices. Voodoo magicians can use spells, amulets, talismans, and rituals for a variety of purposes, including healing, protection, love, and good luck. In voodoo, spirits play an important role. They are seen as intermediaries between the world of the living and the world of spirits. In magical rituals and rituals, spirits are often invited to receive their help or guidance. Voodoo magic is often associated with religious practices such as Voodooism (Vodou) in Haiti and Voodoo in Louisiana, as well as other variants such as Cantongo and Santeria. In these religions, there are gods and spirits who play an important role in worship and rituals. Voodoo often hosts a variety of religious ceremonies and rituals, including dancing, songs and music. Oracles such as bokors or mamalua can be used to predict the future or consult.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN VOODOO SPIRITS AND VOODOO GODS

In Voodoo magic, there is a distinction between spirits and gods, and they play different roles in this tradition: Spirits: Spirits in Voodoo often represent deceased ancestors or may be natural forces and elements of nature. They can be associated with certain places, objects, events, or circumstances. Spirits can have different characteristics and abilities and can be patrons or influence the daily lives of practitioners. In Voodoo magic, working with spirits may involve asking them for advice, help, protection, or to perform certain tasks. Gods and Goddesses: The gods and goddesses in Voodoo represent higher and more powerful forces that control broader aspects of life and the world. They are often more abstract and universal entities than spirits. Gods and goddesses may have their own areas of influence and characteristics, and may be worshipped as part of larger religious pantheons, such as the Loa pantheon in Haitian Voodoo. Basic Principles and Beliefs

The basic principles and beliefs in Voodoo Magic may vary depending on a particular tradition and community, as Voodoo Magic exists in different forms and variations. However, there are some common features and concepts characteristic of many traditions of Voodoo Magic: One of the key features of Voodoo Magic is the belief in the existence of spirits, gods and forces that affect people's lives. These spirits can be of different types and have different functions, and they are most often found in religious rituals and rituals. Voodoo magic, as we noted earlier, often combines elements of African religious beliefs with Christianity and other cultural influences. This syncretism is manifested in the fact that the spirits of Voodoo Magic can be associated with Christian saints and symbols, which allows believers to preserve their tradition in conditions of colonial and religious oppression. In Voodoo Magic, there is often a belief that the souls of the dead continue to exist and can influence the lives of the living. Rituals and rituals are often held to appeal to the souls of the dead and receive their support or help. There are many different spirits and gods in Voodoo Magic, each with its own unique role and function. For example, in Haitian Voodoo, there is a pantheon of loa (or lva), and each Loa is responsible for certain aspects of life, such as love, health, prosperity, art, etc. Here are some of the most famous Loas and their associated spheres: Loa Erzuli Dantur: Responsible for love, femininity, beauty and romance. Loa Shango: Patron Saint of fire, lightning and war. It is also associated with music and dancing. Loa Papa Legba: is the guardian of the threshold and keys, opens the way between the world of spirits and the world of the living. He introduces himself as an old man with a cane. Loa Ogun: Patron saint of blacksmiths, armorers and warriors. Ogun is also associated with iron and technology.

Loa Ida-Vedo: Responsible for family, home and women's well-being.

Loa Osyun: The patron saint of nature, forests and plants. It is often depicted with a root symbolizing a connection with the earth.

Loa Agwe: associated with the sea, fishing and sea travel.

Loa Gede: Patron saint of the dead and necromancy. He is responsible for communication with the world of the dead. Loa Esu: associated with roads and travel. He helps people on their travels and patronizes travelers.

Loa Lasiren: Patroness of music, dance and art. She is often associated with marine life, such as mermaids.

Loa Maman Brigitte: Responsible for death, funeral rites and life after death. Often associated with offrenda, offrenda is an offer to spirits that may include flowers, food, and objects.

Loa Olofin: He is considered the arbiter of fate and the main spirit in Haitian Voodoo. His name is associated with a higher cosmic force.

Loa Danbala Vedo: Associated with snakes and water. It also symbolizes balance and harmony.

Loa Tibon: The patron saint of women with children. She is often called upon during pregnancy and childbirth. Loa Simbi: Simbi are ghost spirits that inhabit aquatic places and play an important role in religious rituals. Loa Kale-Ko: Patron saint of women, especially those related to women's diseases and problems.

Loa Toro: Responsible for agriculture, countryside and crops.

Loa Jacques Moly: Patron of intellectual pursuits, education and knowledge.

Loa is a Master of Liberation: It symbolizes freedom and independence. His name is associated with the struggle for the liberation of Haiti from French colonial rule.

I emphasize that this is just a small part of the Loa pantheon in Haitian Voodoo, and each Loa has its own unique characteristics and associated aspects. In Voodoo Magic, there are often specialists called hungans (men) and mambos (women) who play the role of priests and priestesses. They perform rituals, consult believers and can be intermediaries between spirits and people. These principles and beliefs represent common features of Voodoo Magic, but it is important to note that there are many different traditions and schools of Voodoo Magic, each of which may have its own unique characteristics and practices. The role of rituals and rituals in Voodoo Magic Rituals and rituals perform several key functions and have special meanings for believers. Here are some of the main roles of rituals and rituals in Voodoo Magic. For example, they serve as a means of establishing a connection between believers and spirits, gods, or Loa. During these rituals, believers invoke spirits and gods to draw their attention and receive their support, advice or help in solving specific problems. In Voodoo Magic, rituals can be used to treat physical and spiritual illnesses. Specialized priests perform ceremonies and rituals to exorcise evil spirits and restore balance in the patient's body. A variety of Voodoo Magic rituals can be used to solve various everyday problems such as love issues, financial difficulties, work, protection from negative energies and many others. For example, believers may perform rituals to attract good luck or well-being. Voodoo Magic rituals are also often aimed at cleansing houses, people and objects from negative energies and influences. This helps to create a protective barrier and ensure the safety of believers. Some Voodoo Magic rituals are performed as part of celebrations and social events. They help to unite the community and preserve cultural traditions. Various symbols and magical items such as voodoo dolls, amulets, oils, herbs and candles are used during rituals. These objects have symbolic and magical meanings and serve as a means of transmitting energy and intentions. Voodoo Magic rituals can also be a place where believers receive support and advice from priests.. They play an important role in the religious and magical practice of Voodoo Magic, helping believers find spiritual harmony, solve problems and keep in touch with spirituality. During some rituals of Voodoo Magic, believers can enter a state of trance or possession of the spirit. This can manifest itself in an altered state of consciousness in which believers express their requests, predictions, or messages from spirits. These moments are considered sacred and important. In some traditions of Voodoo Magic, symbolic sacrifices or blood may be used as part of rituals. This may be associated with rites of purification and repentance. Also, Voodoo magic is often accompanied by music and dancing. Rhythmic drums, choirs and dances are used to create energy and contact with spirits. These elements contribute to the creation of an atmosphere of religious ceremonies and are an important component of it. In religious rituals of Voodoo Magic, believers can “transform” into spirits or gods (loa) by imitation and mimicry. It is considered a way of respecting and honoring spirits, as well as a means of communicating with them. Voodoo magic uses a variety of symbols and signs that have magical meaning. These can be geometric shapes, amulets, drawings on the ground or on objects, their meaning may vary depending on the specific ritual.

Rites of passage and initiation:

Rites of passage and initiation in Voodoo Magic are complex and profound ceremonies during which a believer enters into a special connection with spirits and gods, as well as becomes a full member of the Voodoo magic community. The process of initiation and initiation may vary depending on the specific tradition and school of Voodoo Magic, but in general it includes the following stages: Preparation and training: before the initiation ceremony begins, the believer usually goes through a period of preparation and training under the guidance of experienced priests or priestesses of Voodoo Magic. During this period, the believer learns the basics of religious and magical practices, as well as learns the traditions and rituals of his particular tradition of Voodoo Magic.

Purification and preparation: Before the rite itself, the believer can undergo purification and preparation in order to purify himself from negative energies and prepare for the important moment of initiation. The rite of passage itself may include a number of ritual actions, including prayers, songs, dances, incenses, sacrifices and other symbolic acts. During the ceremony, the believer can meet with spirits or gods who accept him into their sphere of influence. In some cases, the rite of passage may include a moment when the believer temporarily possesses the spirit or God. At this point, the believer may show signs of trance or an altered state of consciousness and give voice to the spirit. During the initiation ceremony, a believer may be given a new name or nickname, which symbolizes his connection with a certain spirit or God. After completing the initiation ceremony, the believer becomes a full member of the Voodoo Magic community and gains access to deeper knowledge and practices. He also becomes a part of the religious and magical community and can participate in rituals and rituals. After initiation, the believer is usually supported and accompanied by experienced priests. This helps the believer in developing his skills and knowledge in Voodoo Magic. It is important to note that the rites of initiation and initiation in Voodoo Magic can be very diverse and depend on a particular tradition, community and region. They are often accompanied by music, dancing and magical symbols, creating a unique experience for every believer.

Magical Signs and Symbols of Voodoo Magic: meaning and their features

Magical signs, symbols and symbolism play an important role in various magical practices around the world. They are important for several reasons.

Firstly, it is a connection with energy and archetypes. Magical signs and symbols are often associated with certain energy fields and archetypes. They can serve as a bridge between the conscious and subconscious, allowing the magician to access certain forces and energies. The use of magical symbols can help focus the magician's attention on a specific goal or intention. The symbol becomes a focal point through which the magician can channel his magical energy. In magical systems such as runes, zodiac symbols, or voodoo veves, symbols serve as a means of communication with spirits, gods, or other magical powers. They help the magician convey his intentions and requests at higher levels. We will discuss this in great detail in this book. The symbols can be charged with magical energy and used to create amulets, amulets or talismans. These items can then be worn or placed in certain places to attract certain energies. We will also tell you about this later. Magical signs and symbols can be incorporated into various rituals and rituals to enhance magical work. They serve as handles that the magician uses to control and direct energy. In some magical traditions, symbols have a hidden meaning that is accessible only to those who have undergone certain rituals and training. This is a way to preserve and transfer knowledge within the tradition. It is important to note that magical symbols and their meaning can vary greatly depending on magical tradition, culture and practice. Some magicians may use standard symbols such as the pentagram or ankh, while others develop their own symbols and systems for their own unique purposes. Magical symbols play an important role in Voodoo magic practices. They are used for rituals, rituals, communication with spirits (loa) and the direction of magical influences.

Creating a Pentagram in Voodoo Magic

The pentagram is a five-pointed star, which can be depicted both inside the circle and without it. The appearance may vary depending on the magic system and the preferences of the magician. It is important to keep the shape and symmetry consistent in order to achieve maximum efficiency. Materials: a sheet of paper or a piece of parchment, a black marker or ink, a candle (preferably black or white), an amulet or a stone (optional). Before you start drawing a pentagram, set a clear defense intent. Focus on what you want to protect: yourself, your home, your family, and so on. Start by drawing a circle around a piece of paper or parchment. This circle represents protection and limitation of negative energy. Then draw a five-pointed star (pentagram) inside the circle. Start from one of the vertices and move clockwise. Draw the lines so that you get a star. When you finish drawing the pentagram, hold the sheet in front of the candle and visualize how the symbol fills with light and energy, protecting you from negative influences. You can also say words or prayers for protection, if this is consistent with your practice. Charge the pentagram (optional). If you have an amulet or a stone, you can place a pentagram next to it to charge it with protective energy. Pick up the amulet or stone and focus on the intention of protection, imagining how the energy of the pentagram passes into this object. Place the pentagram in a prominent place. Place the hand-drawn pentagram in a place where it will be visible to you so that it reminds you of protection. You can also wear an amulet with a pentagram around your neck or as a bracelet. It is important to remember that magical practices are based on beliefs and symbolism, and their effectiveness may depend on your faith and conviction. Symbols and rituals can have a strong psychological impact and help you feel protected.

Chapter 3. Magical Tools of Voodoo Magic

In Voodoo Magic, in addition to magical symbols and pentagrams, there are many magical signs, tools, each of which has its own type, purpose and symbolic meaning, especially in Voodoo magic. Below are some of the most common magical tools and amulets, their appearance and purpose:

Vevey (Vèvè): Veves are symbolic drawings or graphic images that are used to invoke and connect with specific spirits or gods. They are usually painted on the ground, altar, or other surfaces using dry powders or liquids. Veves are unique symbols for each spirit and have certain meanings and properties. We will visit an entire chapter below this concept, it is so important in Voodoo magic.

Gris-gris: Gris-gris are small cloth pouches or amulets filled with various magical ingredients such as herbs, stones, metals or other objects. They are created for various purposes, including protection, attracting good luck, healing or driving away negative energies. Next, we will focus on this in great detail.

Medical Bags are amulets that are carried with you for treatment and protection. They usually contain herbs, stones, and other items that have healing properties. Medical bags can be worn around the neck, on the wrist or in a pocket and used as talismans to maintain physical and spiritual health.

Ritual Knives are used for various magical activities, including rituals of cutting and harvesting plants, symbolic actions, or it can be used for initiation rites or worship ceremonies and the preparation of sacrifices. They can have a special shape and decorations that indicate their magical purpose and connection with certain spirits. Voodoo ritual knives often have unique designs, decorations, and symbols. They can be made of a variety of materials, including metal, wood or bone. A sharp blade is usually present on a ritual knife, reflecting its role as a tool for various magical actions. Many Voodoo ritual knives can be decorated with specific symbols, including veves (symbolic drawings), images of loa (spirits), as well as magical symbols and runes.

Amulets and talismans: Amulets and talismans can be made of metal, wood, bone or other materials and are worn as protective symbols. Their shape and decorations may vary, but they usually serve to reflect negative energies and attract positive ones. We will focus on this very briefly here, but later in the book a very large place is given to this.

Magic wands (Wand) are tools used to channel and enhance magical energy during rituals and spells. In Voodoo magic, magic wands can be used to communicate with spirits (Loa), perform worship ceremonies and rituals, as well as for magical manipulations such as channeling energy, creating protective barriers, etc. Individual magic wands can be charged for specific purposes such as healing, protection, attracting good luck or love. Voodoo magic wands can be made of wood, metal, glass, and even crystals. Each material can give the wand its own special properties and energy. The design of a magic wand may include decorations, symbols, runes, stones, feathers, or other items that correspond to the purpose and intentions of the magician.

Bottles and Witchcraft Jars: Bottles and witchcraft jars can be made of different materials such as glass, plastic or wood. It is important that they are clean and have no odors or residues that could affect the magical work. Their appearance can be decorated in various ways, including drawings, symbols, texts, or other decorations. These decorations may be related to the purposes of magical work. Voodoo often uses special bottles and magic jars to create amulets and attract desired energies. They can be filled with various objects such as copper wires, nails, herbs and other materials that correspond to the specific purposes of the ritual.

Shamanic staffs that can be used in practice. Shamanic staffs can be made from a variety of materials, including wood, metal, bone, stones and other natural materials. They are often decorated with symbols, feathers, stones, beads and other objects that have symbolic meaning and can enhance their magical power. Shamanic staffs are used in the magical and religious practices of shamans and mediums. They serve for rituals, rituals and ceremonies, as well as for entering into a trance and communicating with spirits and spirit worlds. Staffs can also be used to channel energy, protect against negative influences, heal rites, and spirit evocation rites. Shamanic staffs are characteristic of shamanic and mediumistic practices, not Voodoo magic. Voodoo is an African religious and magical tradition that has its own rituals and rituals, and it differs from shamanic traditions typical of other cultures.

Bird feathers and bones are used in rituals to communicate with spirits and gods. They can be inserted into amulets or used to create unique symbols.

The Voodoo mirror has the function of reflecting negative energies and protecting against them. Sometimes mirrors are placed in houses or on altars. Mirrors can also be included in rituals to attract light spirits or to reflect negative influences, in love magic practice, in healing. A mirror in Voodoo magic, like other magical tools, is used taking into account the specific intentions and goals of the magician. The Voodoo mirror has the function of reflecting negative energies and protecting against them. Sometimes mirrors are placed in houses or on altars. Mirrors can also be included in rituals to attract light spirits or to reflect negative influences, in love magic practice, in healing. Chapter 5. Amulet and talismans: purpose, creation, prayers, purification

Making amulets and talismans in Voodoo Magic is an important part of the practice, and it can include different materials, symbols, and spells, depending on the goal you want to achieve. It is important to remember that the manufacture and use of amulets and talismans requires respect and observance of magical traditions. Here is the general step-by-step process of creating an amulet or talisman in Voodoo Magic:

First of all, decide on the purpose of creating an amulet or talisman. Be specific about what you want to achieve: it can be protection, attracting good luck, health, love, and so on. Then decide on the materials that will be used to create the amulet. Materials can include herbs, roots, stones, metals, fabrics, wood, and other items appropriate for your purpose.

Before you start, create your own magical workspace, altar, or ritual venue. Make sure that this place is clean and free from distractions. And only after that, proceed to the manufacture of the talisman or amulet itself. Depending on the chosen target and materials, create an amulet or talisman using your magical skills and intuition. For example, you can carve symbolic shapes, create a bag with magical ingredients, or make another object that symbolizes your goal.

During the creation of an amulet or talisman, say spells and prayers to give the object magical power and a connection with the spirits or gods of your faith. The spells can be folk or specific to your Voodoo Magic tradition. After creating the amulet, charge it with energy and your intentions. You can do this by holding the amulet in your hands and visualizing the goal you want to achieve. Depending on the purpose, you can wear the amulet as an ornament, or carry it in a bag, or store it on your altar. Remember that amulets and talismans sometimes require care and maintenance.

The technique of making Amulets and Talismans in Voodoo.

Amulets and talismans in Voodoo magic can be created using various materials and symbols. Here's how to make them. Material Selection: Choose the material that suits your purpose. For example, coins or gold objects are suitable for attracting money, and a piece of black tourmaline is suitable for protection. Here are some common materials and their properties: Amulets and talismans in Voodoo magic can be created using various materials and symbols. Here's how to make them. Material Selection:

Choose the material that suits your purpose. For example, coins or gold objects are suitable for attracting money, and a piece of black tourmaline is suitable for protection. Here are a few common materials and their properties Metals:

Gold: A symbol of wealth and prosperity.

Silver: for protection and purification from negative energy.
Bronze: Material for amulets associated with strength and courage. Stones:

Amethyst: for spiritual harmony and protection. Rose quartz: for love and relationships.

Black tourmaline: Reflects negative energy and provides protection.

The oak tree as a symbol of strength and perseverance. Santal: for meditation and spiritual practice.

Fabrics: Silk: To create amulets to attract good luck and beauty. Cotton: For amulets related to protection and comfort.

Herbs and plants: Lavender for amulets for calm and harmony.

Rosemary: to strengthen memory and mental clarity.

Metal coins: can be used to create amulets to attract money and wealth.

Feathers: Can be used for amulets related to communication and communication.

Glass: to create amulets with certain colors and effects.

The choice of material depends on your purpose and the symbolism that you want to add to the talisman amulet. Do not forget to charge and clean the amulets regularly to maintain their effectiveness.

Plot or Prayer: Say a prayer or a plot that suits your purpose. For example, for an amulet for money, you can say: "With this amulet, I attract wealth and prosperity."

Charging the amulet:

Perform a charging ritual to transfer the desired energy to the amulet. You can hold it in your hands and visualize the goal, as well as say the right words.

Adding Symbols: Apply symbols that are associated with your goal to the amulet. For example, a cross or an occult symbol can be used for a protective amulet.

Carry or place the amulet: Carry the amulet with you as an ornament or store it in the right place. For example, an amulet for money can be carried in a wallet.

Take care of the amulet: it is important to clean and charge the amulet periodically. For cleansing, you can use salt or smoking aromatic herbs. Charge again if you feel that the amulet is losing its effectiveness. Please note that amulets and talismans in Voodoo magic can be varied and have different symbols depending on your purpose and for each purpose of the amulet and talisman there is a prayer in Voodoo magic. Numerous variants of the same prayers are specially collected for you here.

A Voodoo talisman against corruption is a pretty serious and magical process.

However, it should be noted that Voodoo magic associated with spoilage can have negative consequences and is fraught with karmic consequences. Therefore, it is important to use such practices with caution and with respect for ethical standards. If you have serious reasons and intentions to create a Voodoo talisman against spoilage, here's how you can do it. Materials: A small doll or figurine representing the purpose of spoilage (this figure will be called the "spoiling target"). Black fabric. A black candle. A photo or the name of the damage target (if available). Instructions: Start by cleaning up your workspace. Light a black candle and concentrate on your intentions. Take a doll or figurine representing the purpose of the damage and place it on a black cloth. If you have a photo or the name of the spoiling target, place them next to the doll. Tie the figurine and the photo (or name) of the spoiling target with a black cord, imagining how you tie the fate of this target. Say a spell or prayer in which you clearly express your intentions of spoiling. Complete the ritual by closing the black cloth and closing it with threads so that the target of the damage is completely covered. Keep the talisman in a safe place where no one can find or touch it. Be careful and take care of your safety, as spoilage can cause negative reactions and karmic consequences. Remember that using Voodoo magic to damage requires careful thought and can lead to negative consequences for both the target and yourself. I recommend using magic for good purposes and helping others, rather than harming them.

Red or green thread or cord. Steps to create a mascot: Start by cleaning your workplace and place a candle in front of you. Think about the person who needs healing, or about yourself, if these are your own desires. Take the selected item, which will be your mascot, and hold it in your hand. Say a spell (prayer) with intense sincere feelings, expressing your prayers or desires for healing. For example:

“With this Voodoo talisman, I pray for complete healing [of the man’s name]. May he/she gain health and strength.”

Burn the end of the red or green thread or cord over the candle and attach it to the talisman to create a loop or loop. Leave the candle burning for a while longer, thinking about the person’s recovery. When the candle is completely burned out, carefully make sure that the thread or cord is firmly attached to the talisman. Where to wear or store the talisman depends on your preferences and magical beliefs. For example, you can wear it as a pendant around your neck or a bracelet, and also keep it close to the patient so that he can see it and feel the closeness. A vow of gratitude: “I promise to keep your gratitude in my heart and actions. May your wisdom and power always be with me.”

Gifts and sacrifices: In some religious traditions, to express gratitude, people may offer gifts or sacrifices to spirits or gods. These can be flowers, food, water, or other items that have symbolic meaning. Gratitude Meditation: Do a meditation during which you visualize spirits or gods, feel their presence, and express your sincere gratitude for their help and guidance. Choose a way of expressing gratitude that is consistent with your beliefs and traditions, and spend it with sincerity and respect. This will help strengthen the bond between you and the spirits or gods who support you.

HOW TO ENERGETICALLY “PURIFY” AND “CHARGE” MAGIC TALSIMANES AND AMULETS

In Voodoo magic, as in other magical traditions, cleansing and charging talismans and amulets play an important role in their use.

Here's how to properly perform energy purification and charging of talismans and amulets in the context of Voodoo magic. Energy cleansing: Before you start cleaning talismans or amulets, make sure that you are in a calm and focused state of mind. Magical work requires attention and respect. One of the common methods of purification in Voodoo magic is the use of smoke. You can use herbs or resins such as benzoin, myrrh, cedar resin, St. John's wort or palo santo. Hold a talisman or amulet up to the smoke and let the smoke purify it of negative energies. Water purifications are also used. Wash the talisman or amulet with running water, imagining how it washes away negative energies. You can add a little sea salt or Epsom salt to the water to enhance the cleansing effect. Solar and lunar light can be used for energy purification of talismans and amulets. Put them in the sun or under the moonlight for a while, imagining how the light cleanses and energizes them. Energy charging: Before you start the charging process, decide what goal you want to achieve with a talisman or amulet. Focus on your intentions and goals. Prayers and affirmations play an important role in Voodoo magic. Bring a talisman or amulet to your heart and say a prayer or affirmation, expressing your intentions and requests. You can place a talisman or amulet on your altar and use it as a focus for performing magical rituals and spells. Charge it with energy aimed at achieving your goal. In Voodoo magic, symbolism is of great importance. You can use special symbols known as "vevey" to charge a talisman or amulet. Apply the desired veves to the object and visualize how they transfer the necessary energy. Charging with Voodoo spirits: If your practices include: this includes working with loa (Voodoo spirits), then you can conduct ceremonies and rituals by inviting the appropriate Loa to help charge the talisman or amulet with their energy. Voodoo magic is a deep and ritualistic practice, and each talisman or amulet may have its own characteristics and requirements depending on the specific context and purpose. Working with these magical objects requires attention to detail, reverence for spirits, and observance of traditional rituals. In addition to the above methods of cleansing and charging, it is also important to listen to your intuitive voice and tune in to the appropriate energy while working with talismans and amulets. They can become powerful tools to achieve your goals and desires if you properly clean and charge them according to your intentions.

Chapter 6. The AFRICAN Doll: meaning, preparation, rituals and rituals Voodoo magic uses a variety of magical tools and symbols to perform rituals, appeal to spirits and achieve certain goals. The importance and significance of these tools may vary depending on the specific tradition and purpose of the magical work. Including the Voodoo doll (or “Voodoo mannequin”), let’s take a look at some of these magical tools and their meaning. Voodoo Doll: The Voodoo doll is one of the most famous and mystical symbols of Voodoo magic. It can represent a specific person and be used to influence them. Voodoo magicians believe that by inserting needles, spells, or other magical items into a doll, you can influence the victim, causing her illness, pain, or attracting good luck. It is important to note that Voodoo dolls are not always used for evil purposes, and their use can be extremely positive.
